

Classroom Helpers

Partners in classroom learning

Classroom Helpers are a valuable addition to the learning provided by the teacher and can be a support to both individual students and classroom groups. Evidence suggests that when adult volunteers are present, students see that adults take school and education seriously and respect learning. This promotes positive attitudes toward school.

Who can be a Classroom Helper?

Classroom Helpers can be a parent, grandparent, carer or even an aunt or uncle. Helping out could happen once a week, monthly or could even be taking some time to share your special skill or knowledge to support students with their personal passion project or classroom activity during the term.
